Salzburg 2009: Week 10

Earlier in the quarter students made short films detailing the fictional lives of one of the dwarves in the Dwarf Garden in Mirabell Gardens.

Here, after some technical glitches, are all the films. Enjoy!

Monday: Excursion to Hallein and the former salt mines

Last meeting with Johannes
Changing into the protective clothing for the salt mines

Riding the train into the mines
Sliding down to lower levels of the salt mines
Monday was a state holiday, and the buses stopped early, which meant that we got to hike back to the train station
Wednesday: Excursion to the Salzkammergut (Dachstein Ice Caves and Hallstatt)

Taking the cable car up to the caves
A short hike up to the caves
Ice, not that kind of Eis!
At the Hallstatt museum and its 3D film

Hallstatt village square
Our last ice cream on the banks of the Hallstaetter Lake
No explanation necessary!

Thursday during the last class meeting: Oscar award ceremony
Thursday evening: Farewell Party
Future Bobcats?
Before and After: Salzburg 2009
First day of class in March

Last day of class in June:
On that first day, it snowed and was miserable. On the last day, we had a warm breeze and only a few clouds on a sunny day. In the picture from our last day above, you can see longer hair, and bigger and more smiles - as well as t-shirts and souvenirs from everyone's travels (as well as some tired eyes after attending a university party the previous evening). That hints at all the ways in which this group has grown and what they've experienced: they've seen and learned about lots of Austria and the rest of Europe, they've become well connected with local students and university life in Salzburg, and they've all become much brighter! Thanks for being a great group and for making the program a success! I hope the program was an Elefant for you all - and of course, an Eis!
